

Wall Street Journal Reports Tzu Chi's Good Works

Written by Tzu Chi Foundation
Thursday, 01 April 2010 09:27

Tzu Chi Foundation appeared on the Wall Street Journal in its March 12-14 weekend edition. The article was reported on five pages in the hard copy of the Journal as well as online edition.

The article talked about Tzu Chi's recycling stations, Tzu Chi Great Love Village for the survivors of Typhoon Morakot, as well as Tzu Chi's international relief footprints in Myanmar, Indonesia, El Salvador, North Korea, China, etc.

The article said, "By branching into cross-border humanitarian relief, Tzu Chi has become the first Asia-based Buddhist organization to enter a field dominated by large Western aid groups." "One of Tzu Chi's core principles is that relief supplies—blankets, food parcels—should be handed over personally, with a bow, by volunteers. The foundation feels this expresses sincerity and gratitude, in line with the movement's teachings."

Original article: Good works: A Taiwan charity's global reach